

VIRTUAL VISITING SCHOLAR

NATASHA BOWENS BLAIR

CAMPUS READ INITIATIVE
WITH CSU FORT COLLINS

LIBRARY ACADEMIC AND RESOURCE CENTER, ROOM 109
OCTOBER 15, VIRTUAL EVENT FROM 4:00-5:00 PM
COLORADO STATE UNIVERSITY PUEBLO

FOR MORE INFORMATION

Contact joelle.quigley@csupueblo.edu to learn more about facilitating activities and discussions around this book in your classroom or student group.

WOLVES READ
COLORADO STATE UNIVERSITY
PUEBLO

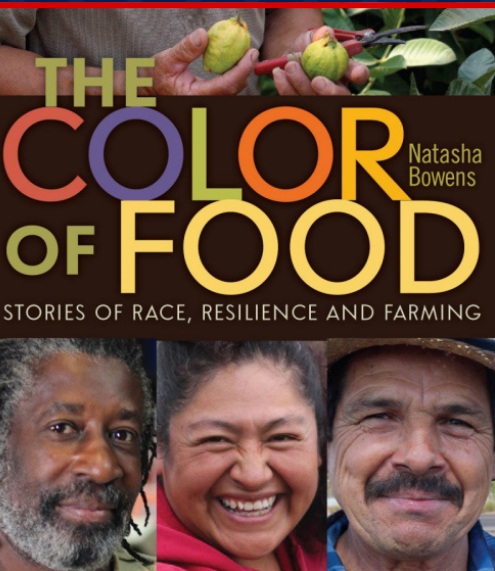

WOLVES READ

WHAT IS WOLVESREAD?

This is a Campus Read initiative with CSU Fort Collins that encourages our university communities to read together and host collaborative discussions centered around a single book. FREE copies are available at the University Library.

ABOUT THE BOOK

This year's book is The Color of Food: Stories of Race, Resilience and Farming, by Natasha Bowens. The book aims to explore the issues of justice, and inclusivity in the food justice movement, while amplifying the role of communities of color and challenging the history and status quo of agricultural identity. Through the sharing of stories of farmers of color, The Color of Food teaches us that the good food movement is about more than buying local and protecting our soil, it's about digging deep and discovering that true food sovereignty means a place at the table for everyone.

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

Natasha Bowens Blair is a Black/Bi-Racial woman living out her passion on the farm she co-owns Native Mountain Farm in Boonsboro, MD. She is also an author and community activist who has spent the last decade focusing on building empowerment and highlighting the importance of farming, food, and storytelling in communities of color.

WOLVES READ

COLORADO STATE UNIVERSITY
PUEBLO