NEW SERIES HELPS STUDENTS GET TO KNOW FACULTY

The MCCR department, in conjunction with Academic Affairs, is elevating the stories of our faculty in a new feature called Get To Know The Faculty. This video series highlights faculty members' journey to CSU Pueblo and showcases their passion for teaching, as well as any current researching projects. Enrollment research tells us that prospective students like to know more about the people they will interact with as a student on our campus, and getting to know a faculty member can impact their college selection. Every faculty member has a unique story, and sharing these stories will help prospective students relate to their professors before they even set foot on campus. This series will rotate between colleges with the goal of eventually giving each faculty member a video biography that can also be placed on the CSU Pueblo website. In June, the Get To Know the Faculty segment featured Dr. Chad Kinney, Director of the Institute of Cannabis Research and a professor of chemistry. A video about Dan McFadden, a professor in the social work department, debuted in August. Both of these videos can be found on the CSU Pueblo Facebook, Twitter, and YouTube pages, and have been actively promoted across social media channels. As more professors volunteer to participate in this video series, it may increase in frequency to bi-weekly. If you know a faculty member who has an interesting story that you want to nominate for this video series, please contact Sean Pooley at sean.pooley@csupueblo.edu.
